

MGMT2726 EXAM NOTES

Week 1: Ethics and Sustainability

Negative effects of globalisation:

- increased polarisation within and between nations
- aggregate effects of individual corporate actions and financial market decisions
- financial interdependence mean the poorest nations suffer
- social exclusion: exclusion of individuals or groups from the benefits to be gained from full participation in society

Week 2: Understanding ethics and sustainability

Reductionist thinking: not appropriate in business – masks interdependences and systems - any theory or method that holds that a complex idea, system, etc. can be completely understood in terms of its simpler parts or components

Systems thinking: understanding by looking at the whole, not just an individual part of the pattern – Senge: everything is interconnected, and each has an influence on the other, but you can't see everything in a snapshot

Positive feedback loops: increase what you see - A produces more of B which in turn produces more of A.

Negative feedback loops: decrease what you see - when some function of the output of a system, process, or mechanism is fed back in a manner that tends to reduce the fluctuations in the output, whether caused by changes in the input or by other disturbances.

Wicked problems: Horst & Rittel:

- Difficult to define
- Interdependencies and multi-causal
- No clear solution
- Socially complex; crosses boundaries
- Involves changing behaviour
- Seemingly intractable

Sphere of Influence: Waddock:

- Economic sphere: business: economic values
- Political sphere: government: power values
- Social sphere: civil society: relationship values
- Ecological sphere: natural environment: ecologising values

Sustainability thinking: surfacing and questioning the mental models and sense-making habits that underpin much of current management practice. Sustainability writers argue that the earth's resources are finite, and this in itself places limits on continued economic growth ad infinitum.

Sustainability: five central concepts

- Interdependence of our major systems – human political, economic, social, cultural and natural systems
- Needs and rights of future generations – long term thinking
- Value of diversity – of cultural, economic, social and natural systems
