This is a comprehensive study of the 2015 general election in Britain designed not only for students and scholars of British politics but also for the interested reader It looks at the record of the Coalition government both in terms of its plans and performance particularly in relation to the economy as the starting point for understanding what happened The authors go on to examine the campaign during the run up to polling day and to explain why people voted the way they did They also take a close look at the various constituency battlegrounds across the country showing how and why voting patterns varied across Britain Finally they discuss the implications of the election outcome for the future of the party system and British politics more generally This book provides important insights into an election which has permanently changed the political geography of Britain

The Economic and Electoral Consequences of Austerity Policies in Britain Paul Whiteley, David Sanders, Marianne C. Stewart, Harold D. Clarke, 2013 The aim of this paper is to examine the electoral impact of the economic strategy pursued by the Coalition government in Britain since it came to power in the May 2010 and to study the role of the economy in influencing voting support for political parties over time Immediately after the general election there was a great deal of support for the proposed austerity programme with widespread agreement among elites and public alike about what should be done However as analyses presented below show public attitudes have subsequently evolved with increasingly sharp disagreements emerging over the Coalition's austerity policy The paper investigates the relationship between inflation unemployment and public attitudes to the economy and their links to voting support using aggregate time series methods and also multi level modelling with British Election Study data The evidence shows that there is a close relationship between the state of the economy and political support and the implication is that the coalition parties are likely to lose the next election if the economy does not improve
