Americans In Paris A Literary Anthology Library Of America:

The Cambridge Companion to American Travel Writing Alfred Bendixen, Judith Hamera, 2009-01-29 Travel writing has always been intimately linked with the construction of American identity Occupying the space between fact and fiction it exposes cultural fault lines and reveals the changing desires and anxieties of both the traveller and the reading public These specially commissioned essays trace the journeys taken by writers from the pre revolutionary period right up to the present They examine a wide range of responses to the problems posed by landscapes found both at home and abroad from the Mississippi and the Southwest to Europe and the Holy Land Throughout the contributors focus on the role played by travel writing in the definition and formulation of national identity and consider the experiences of minority writers as well as canonical authors This Companion forms an invaluable guide for students approaching this new important and exciting subject for the first time

Voices of Cosmopolitanism in Early American Writing and Culture Chiara Cillerai, 2017-10-04 This book argues that cosmopolitanism was a feature of early American discourses of nation formation and eighteenth century colonialism With the analysis of writings by Thomas Jefferson Benjamin Franklin Elizabeth Graeme Fergusson Philip Mazzei and Olaudah Equiano the book reassesses the terms in which we understand cosmopolitanism its relationship with local and transatlantic environments and the way these representative writers from different segments of colonial society identified themselves and America within the transatlantic context The book shows that the transnational and universalist appeal of the cosmopolitan not only accompanies empire building and defines a narrative that aligns the cosmopolitan perspective of global understanding and cooperation with western political ideology The language of the cosmopolitan also forms the basis of a rhetoric that resists imperial expansion and allows writers in a variety of cultural social and political margins to find a voice to identify themselves America and the transatlantic world they imagine

Writing the Lost Generation Craig Monk, 2010-11 Members of the Lost Generation American writers and artists who lived in Paris during the 1920s continue to occupy an important place in our literary history Rebellious against increased commercialism and the ebb of cosmopolitan society in early twentieth century America they rejected the culture of what Ernest Hemingway called a place of broad lawns and narrow minds Much of what we know about these iconic literary figures comes from their own published letters and essays revealing how adroitly they developed their own reputations by controlling the reception of their work Surprisingly the literary world has paid less attention to their autobiographies In Writing the Lost Generation Craig Monk unlocks a series of neglected texts while reinvigorating our reading of more familiar ones Well known autobiographies by Malcolm Cowley Ernest Hemingway and Gertrude Stein are joined here by works from a variety of lesser known but still important expatriate American writers including Sylvia Beach Alfred Kreymborg Samuel
