The New Engineering Contract Arthur McInnis, 2001 The introduction of the New Engineering Contract NEC encourages a systematic approach to contracting which is multidisciplinary in nature and fully interlocked in form The NEC is intended by its supporters to be more flexible and easier to use than any current leading traditional standard forms of contract It is believed that these features reduce adversariality and disputes The NEC seeks to achieve this aim primarily through co operative management techniques and incentives built into the NEC's procedures This commentary analyses and evaluates these and related claims of innovation The New Engineering Contract A legal commentary examines the background to the NEC its design objectives structure procedures and likely judicial interpretation to determine whether it improves upon the traditional standard forms of contract. Special attention is given in the commentary to the development and the significance of the principles underlying preparation of the NEC as well as the arguments in favour of and against them. Throughout the detailed commentary upon the NEC clauses comparisons to the traditional forms are also made to highlight unique features and principles of general application. The conclusion reached is that the NEC does make a significant contribution to the development of standard forms of contract, addresses many of their shortcomings and offers one of the best models for their future development direction and design. The commentary draws upon the body of the project management literature and legal analysis to support its conclusions. The New Engineering Contract: A legal commentary will be essential reading for lawyers, barristers and solicitors as well as engineers and project managers.

Using and Understanding Engineering Service and Construction Contracts John R. Clark, 2012-12-06

1 HISTORICAL BACKGROUND In the late 1950s many members of the design professions, Engineers as well as Architects, became concerned about their exposure to claims for professional malpractice and particularly about the increasing number of claims that had been successfully brought against them arising out of their Construction Phase activities. This led to special studies sponsored by the American Institute of Architects and the Engineers Joint Counsel. The outcome was twofold: the development of a policy of professional liability insurance to insure Engineers and Architects against errors and omissions in the performance of their professional services and the review and development of the customary contractual arrangements defining the design professional's undertakings vis-à-vis his client, the Owner, the Project to be designed and the Contractor who was to implement that design. At the outset the AIA's Owner-Architect Agreement No. B131, General Conditions No. A201 and the Owner-Contractor Agreements Nos. A101, 111 were the documents most frequently used by design professionals and these received particular attention. In the early 1960s it became apparent that there was a need for a separate series of documents prepared to address these relationships when the Project to be designed involved primarily engineering considerations. The number of Projects for which the Engineer was employed by the Owner as the prime professional to handle the Project design and construction administration was increasing.

Cornes and Lupton's Design Liability in the Construction Industry Sarah Lupton, 2013-12-31

Liability for the design of a building or structure is of fundamental concern to construction professionals: design-build contractors, specialist sub-contractors and lawyers. Although other texts cover a wide range of aspects of liability, only Cornes and Lupton's Design Liability in Construction draws together all those matters that relate specifically to design. A number of factors have come together recently and are addressed in this significant update and rewrite of the 4th edition, including popularity of design-build procurement, partnering arrangements and early contractor involvement, new standard forms of construction contract and appointment and revisions to older forms, technical innovations in construction, collaborative working and BIM systems, many well-publicised cases regarding design failures, significant developments in the law of tort and professional liability, the development of the single European market and increased provision of services overseas Together these factors create a new range of design liability issues which the construction professional has to face Written for lawyers architects engineers and contractors the fifth edition of Design Liability in Construction will also serve as a useful text for masters level courses in engineering surveying and construction law
