

Designed to be a more effective and efficient flight deck

The design of the 777 flight deck, like every aspect of the airplane, is market driven. It incorporates ideas presented by pilots and engineers from airlines around the world. Human factors engineering, which is central to the 777 flight deck design, reduces pilot workload and optimizes awareness by making it easier to access and respond to information about flight conditions and aircraft status. And the flight deck will accommodate evolving flight operations information without requiring major changes.

Features:

- Seats, controls and accommodations are ergonomically designed.
- Color flat-panel LCDs provide a better interface between crew and systems with displays that use the latest human factors engineering principles: the information area is larger; the displays are more readable in bright sunlight; and they are reconfigurable for redundancy and greater flexibility.
- CDCs make data easier to find and interpret, and they reduce heads-down time for pilots by using color and shading to highlight changes and commands.
- Touch-pad cursor control devices, similar to a "mouse" on a personal computer, reduce the time spent manipulating data on primary displays.
- Electronic checklists increase pilot efficiency by automatically sequencing normal checklists and correlating non-normal checklists with ECAS alert messages. Many checklist items are automatically confirmed.
- To expedite maintenance, the maintenance station presents data in formats developed by experienced personnel. The maintenance station includes a keyboard, a cursor control and a large flat-panel display.

Legend:

- A. Overhead panel with larger nomenclature, cool LED lighted switches and lightplates, and cockpit lighting master brightness control.
- B. Full-time, triple-channel autopilot with selectable flight path angle and track modes.
- C. Color flat-panel liquid crystal displays (LCD).
 - 1. Primary flight displays (PFD).
 - 2. Navigation displays (ND).
 - 3. Engine indicating and crew alerting system (ECAS).
 - 4. Multifunction display (MFD).
 - 5. Optional side LCDs.
 - 6. Standby flight instruments.
 - 7. Flight management control display units (CDU).
- D. Touch-pad cursor control devices.
- E. Full-size printer.
- F. Maintenance station.
