Other circuits may share power or ground terminals or wiring with the circuit shown. It was that circuit we drew about to another. For example, is it short and has an arrowhead at the end of it pointing in the direction of current flow. Next to the arrowhead is the name of the signal or component which shares that wiring. To quickly check shared wiring, check the operation of a component it names. If that component works, you know the shared wiring is OK.

[illegible]

All in-line and prefix connectors are numbered (C105, C416, etc.). Component connectors are not numbered but are identified either by the name of the component if the component only has one connector, or by a capital letter (A, B, C, etc.) if the component has more than one connector.

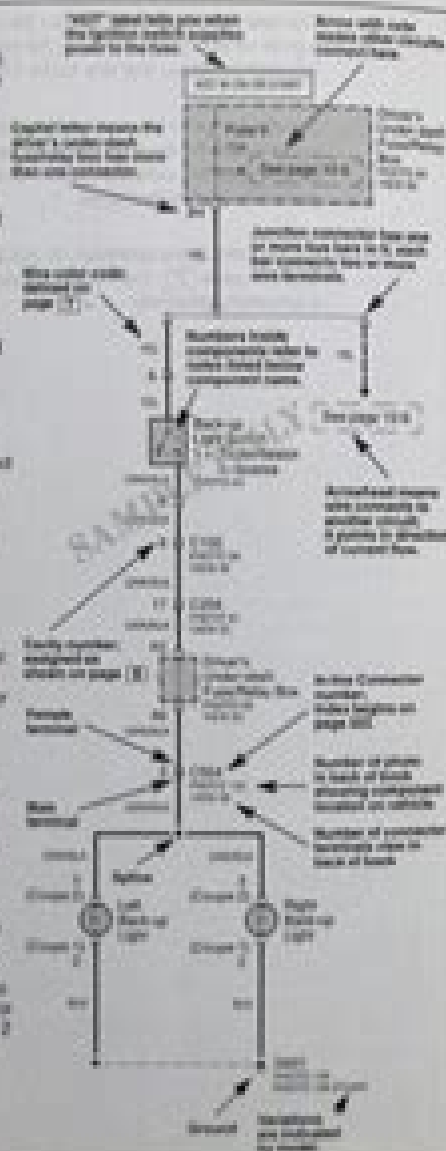

Below most connector outlets and component boxes are F4270 and VIEW numbers. The F4270 number refers to a photo in the back of the book that shows the connector's location on the car. The VIEW number refers to an illustration in the back of the book that shows the connector terminals, wire colors, connector cavity numbers, and other details.

Wires are identified by the international system of this industry. The second color is the color of the stripe. Wires are also identified by their location in a connector. The numbering "1" used in the table and female wire numbers at CMAA, for example, change. These numbers just in itself is not consistent CMAA.

Power Distribution Schematics

Power Distribution schematics show how power is supplied from the positive battery terminal to various circuits in the vehicle. Refer to the Power Distribution section to get a more detailed understanding of how power is supplied to the circuit you're working on. Individual circuit schematics begin with a fuse. So if Power Distribution shows that an inoperative circuit and another circuit share a fuse, check a component in the other circuit. If it works, you know the fuse is good and power is available to the inoperative circuit.
