Responses to the Nazi Extermination

They put us again in the train and we had to sit on the wooden floor, packed like herring, head and toes next to each other. They gave us one loaf of bread, period. And that had to last - but we didn't know for how long it had to last. People were dying in the train left and right. Next to me was a Jewish doctor from Vienna and he was dying and it was real dark in the train. He kept on making noises, like there were maybe the death rattle from the throat and there were German soldiers with guns sitting in front of us. One of them said, "Quiet, quiet!" But he wasn't quiet because now I think he was unconscious. With his rifle the German started to beat us. He beat me horrible. As a matter of fact I couldn't speak for a whole week. Nothing would come out. After he beat me the German shot the guy and he was dead. The body, of course, stayed there all along. As a matter of fact I sat on him because it was more comfortable to sit on him than on the floor. I still have the aftereffects of that beating. And when I get home I cannot talk. Years later I became president of my hospital's medical staff and chief of doctors at St. Margaret's Hospital. I remember one day there were arguments back and forth among executive committee members. The discussion became heated. And I

I tried for maybe ten minutes. And I never told them why - I became a real workaholic. I tirelessly worked day and night, day and night, day and night. Then, when I was 55 I had a heart attack. I had delivered 92 babies that month. 92 deliveries! All our effort is to make sure the mother and babies are well and healthy. On the other hand the Germans killed millions of children like nothing. You tell me, is there a hell?
