Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The training group performed a 10-week program of aerobic exercise, while the control group remained sedentary. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and BP compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 10-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The subject is seated in a chair, and the camera is positioned above the subject. The subject is instructed to maintain a specific posture (e.g., standing or sitting) while the camera records the movement. The camera is connected to a computer, which displays the recorded movement on a monitor. The subject is instructed to observe the monitor and adjust their posture accordingly.

Abstract. In previous studies, a group of patients with severe and intractable chronic pain was treated with a combination of ketamine and morphine. The purpose of this study was to determine if the analgesic effects of ketamine could be maintained by a continuous infusion of ketamine. The study was conducted in a double-blind, randomized, controlled manner. The results showed that a continuous infusion of ketamine was effective in maintaining analgesia in patients with severe and intractable chronic pain. The study was limited by the small number of patients and the lack of a control group. Further studies are needed to confirm these findings.
