

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their work. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the subject matter.

Mixing and comparing colours

The perception of light makes colours visible. Light travels in waves of different lengths, and the same level of electromagnetic radiation gives rise to different colours. The range of wavelengths perceived can be called the visible spectrum – the shortest visible wavelength is violet, and the longest is red. Artists can gain insight from scientific principles that describe how wavelengths and other factors – like the colour of the background – affect the colour in a painting, for example the colour of reflected light.

The colour wheel

From understanding the way colours are represented by the human eye, scientists have developed a colour wheel, which helps to visualise the relationships between colours. The colour wheel is a circular diagram that shows the relationships between colours. It is divided into three main sections: primary colours, secondary colours, and tertiary colours. The primary colours are red, yellow, and blue. The secondary colours are orange, green, and purple. The tertiary colours are the mixtures of primary and secondary colours. The colour wheel is a useful tool for artists to understand the relationships between colours and to create harmonious colour schemes.

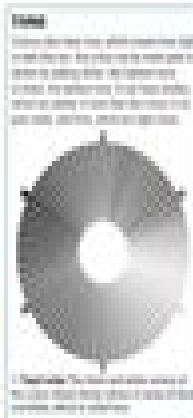

Primary and secondary

Red, yellow, and blue are the primary colors. They are the colors that cannot be created by mixing other colors. Orange, green, and purple are the secondary colors. They are created by mixing two primary colors. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

More colour mixtures

When you mix two primary colors, you create a secondary color. When you mix two secondary colors, you create a tertiary color. The color wheel shows the relationships between these colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Intensity

Intensity refers to the brightness or dullness of a color. A color with high intensity is bright and vibrant, while a color with low intensity is dull and muted. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Complementary

Complementary colors are colors that are opposite each other on the color wheel. They are the colors that create the most vibrant contrast when mixed. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Transparency

Transparency refers to the ability of a color to allow light to pass through it. A transparent color is one that allows light to pass through it, while an opaque color is one that does not. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

How artists use colour

Artists work with colour to achieve a particular effect in their work. Artists use colour to create a mood, to convey a message, or to create a visual impact. They use colour to create a sense of depth, to create a sense of movement, or to create a sense of rhythm. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

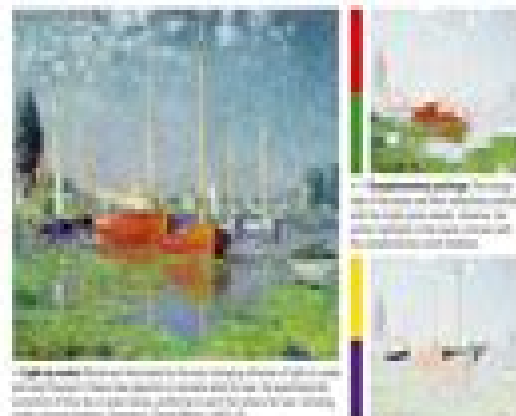

However, artists do not have to follow the color wheel. They can use color in a way that is not based on the color wheel. They can use color to create a mood, to convey a message, or to create a visual impact. They can use color to create a sense of depth, to create a sense of movement, or to create a sense of rhythm. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Creating impact

Artists use color to create a visual impact. They use color to create a sense of depth, to create a sense of movement, or to create a sense of rhythm. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Distance

Distance refers to the perceived distance of an object. Artists use color to create a sense of distance. They use color to create a sense of depth, to create a sense of movement, or to create a sense of rhythm. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.

Expressing emotion

Artists use color to express emotion. They use color to create a sense of mood, to convey a message, or to create a visual impact. They use color to create a sense of depth, to create a sense of movement, or to create a sense of rhythm. The color wheel shows the relationships between colors and how they can be mixed to create other colors.
