INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this report is to provide a summary of the results of a research program conducted by ACI Committee 502 to evaluate the effectiveness of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete. The program included a series of tests on concrete beams and slabs, and a review of the literature on the subject.

PDF

The research program was conducted by ACI Committee 502, which was established in 1978 to study the problem of concrete bonding. The committee's work has been supported by the American Concrete Institute (ACI) and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA).

The committee's work has been divided into three main areas: (1) the development of test methods for evaluating concrete bonding; (2) the evaluation of the effectiveness of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete; and (3) the development of design guidelines for the use of epoxy and latex in concrete bonding.

The committee's work has been summarized in a series of reports, including this report. The reports provide a detailed account of the committee's work, including the test methods used, the results of the tests, and the design guidelines developed. The reports are available to ACI members and to the general public through the ACI Document Fund.

The committee's work has been recognized by the American Concrete Institute (ACI) and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). The committee's work has been cited in numerous technical papers and books, and it has been used as a basis for the development of design guidelines for the use of epoxy and latex in concrete bonding.

CONCLUSIONS

1. Epoxy and latex are effective in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete.
2. The effectiveness of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete is dependent on the type of concrete, the type of bonding agent, and the method of application.
3. The use of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete can result in a significant increase in the strength and durability of the concrete.
4. The use of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete can result in a significant increase in the service life of the concrete.
5. The use of epoxy and latex in the bonding of freshly mixed and hardened concrete can result in a significant increase in the cost of the concrete.

The committee's work has been summarized in a series of reports, including this report. The reports provide a detailed account of the committee's work, including the test methods used, the results of the tests, and the design guidelines developed. The reports are available to ACI members and to the general public through the ACI Document Fund.
