Located example

In the Lake District, in the North West of England, over 18 million tourists visit each year. This can lead to problems such as erosion, congestion and littering.

Management Strategies

As a result, several management strategies have been used to manage the area. To reduce erosion, footpaths have been reinforced by the Fix the Fells scheme. As a result, there has been less trampling, leading to more vegetation growing. Another strategy that has been used is the 'Drive less, see more' campaign which encourages people to explore the area without a car. To facilitate this many car parks are located on the edge of the towns and some school playgrounds have been turned in to car parks during the school holidays. This helps to avoid traffic congestion and overcrowding in the centre of the town. As a result, there have been fewer accidents and less delays for local people travelling to work. Finally, posters have been put up with signs saying 'take your litter home' to educate tourists about how to be responsible for their waste. As a result, less litter has been dropped which has helped to protect animal's habitats. Therefore, increasing the number of animals in the food chain.
