WATER-PROOFING IS CRUCIAL THESE DAYS The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued a new rule that requires all new buildings to be constructed with water-resistant exterior walls. The rule is part of the agency's ongoing effort to reduce the amount of water that enters buildings and causes damage. The rule applies to all new buildings, regardless of size or type. It also applies to existing buildings that are being renovated or repaired. The rule is based on the fact that water is a major cause of damage to buildings. It can cause structural damage, mold, and other problems. The rule requires that all exterior walls be constructed with a water-resistant material, such as concrete or masonry. It also requires that all windows and doors be properly sealed. The rule is expected to save billions of dollars in damage to buildings each year.
