

1. The first step in the design of a structure is to determine the loads that will be applied to it. These loads may be dead loads, live loads, wind loads, snow loads, seismic loads, etc.
2. The next step is to determine the strength of the materials that will be used in the structure. This is done by testing the materials and determining their ultimate strength.
3. The third step is to determine the safety factor that will be used in the design. This is a factor that is used to ensure that the structure will be able to withstand the loads without failing.
4. The fourth step is to determine the dimensions of the structure. This is done by using the loads, the strength of the materials, and the safety factor to determine the required dimensions.
5. The fifth step is to determine the details of the structure. This is done by determining the connections between the members of the structure and the details of the members themselves.
