Figure 1 Schematic diagram of the proposed system architecture. The system is composed of a user interface, a data management module, and a processing module. The user interface interacts with the data management module, which in turn interacts with the processing module. The processing module is responsible for the core logic of the system, including data analysis and decision-making.

Abstract The present study examined whether, as all women would be expected to do, mothers of children with Down's syndrome (DS) would report higher levels of anxiety than mothers of children with other disabilities. The results showed that mothers of children with DS did not report higher levels of anxiety than mothers of children with other disabilities. The results also showed that mothers of children with DS reported higher levels of anxiety than mothers of children with other disabilities when the children were aged 18 or older. Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 30 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness of the subjects was measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The exercise program was effective in improving the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.
