Conflicts Developed Between the Colonies and Great Britain:

During the 17th and 18th centuries, Great Britain (formerly called England) established 13 colonies in North America. Great Britain ruled over the colonies. However, by the late 1700s, problems developed between Great Britain and the colonists. The British Parliament, which was the law-making body in Great Britain, disagreed with the colonists over how the colonies should be governed.

 Parliament Believed:	 The Colonists Believed:
• It had legal authority in the colonies	• Their local assemblies had legal authority in the colonies
• It had the right to tax the colonies	• The colonies should not be taxed since they had no representation in Parliament (this was known as "taxation without representation")

Because of these disagreements, and other events that occurred, many colonists wanted independence from Great Britain. They hoped to form a new country.

Thomas Jefferson wrote a document called the Declaration of Independence. It explained the reasons why the colonists wanted independence from Great Britain. It stated that the authority to govern belongs to the people rather than to kings. It also stated that all people are created equal and have rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

The Declaration of Independence

Eventually, the conflicts between Parliament and the colonists led to the Revolutionary War. This war was fought in the 13 Colonies.

Various Experiences of Virginians During the Revolutionary War:

When the Revolutionary War began, Virginians had to choose sides:

- Virginia patriots served in the Continental Army. They fought for independence from Great Britain. Their actions helped lead to the British surrender at Yorktown.
- Some Virginians remained loyal to Great Britain. They were known as loyalists.
- Some neutral Virginians did not take sides in the war.

African Americans had various experiences during the war. Some enslaved African Americans supported the British, who promised them freedom. Some free African Americans fought for independence from Great Britain.

Women took on more responsibilities to support the war effort.

Some American Indians fought with the Virginia patriots, and others fought with the British.
