

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1.1C The teacher displays knowledge of content and pedagogy	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to rely more on what is taught in the textbook. The teacher displays little understanding of pedagogical knowledge important to students in learning of the content. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of pedagogical approaches available to students in learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of a systematic of how these concepts relate to student learning. The teacher understands content as a subject to be taught, although such knowledge may be used well in the classroom. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogical approaches to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to student learning. The teacher displays some awareness and understanding of pedagogical approaches in relation to the discipline. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wider range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to student learning and to pedagogical approaches. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of pedagogical approaches and uses them to enhance student learning and understanding of the discipline. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1.2C Planning Instructional Approaches	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional objectives, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students in active intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness in motivating students to take activities and offer new variety.	Some of the learning activities and materials are aligned with instructional objectives and represent meaningful intellectual challenge, but with no different student level or an ineffective instructional group partially appropriate activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a meaningful structure, but the progression of activities is uneven, with only some meaningful time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional objectives and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent significant intellectual challenge, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to learn.
2.1C Creating an Environment of Respect and Rapport	Relationships between interactions, both between a teacher and students and among students, are generally negative, inappropriate, or less than the teacher and/or, cultural learning goals, and if made good there is. Student interactions are characterized by teasing, put-downs, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Some positive relationships exist, both between a teacher and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, behaviors, is designed for students' ages, cultures, and developmental level. Students rarely demonstrate disagreement or conflict. The teacher attempts to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the interactions is neutral, occupying neither positive nor conflict.	Most students interact positively and respectfully with one another and respect. Such interactions are appropriate to the ages, cultures, and developmental levels of the students, with positive among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher responds successfully to disrespectful behavior among students. The majority of the interactions is polite, respectful and harmonious, though students may be aware when conflict arises in taking instructional roles.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting genuine warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all students in the class. The unit is well known to students and all students feel valued and a comfortable learning environment.
2.2C Managing Student Behavior	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students in the classroom. There is little or no time in monitoring of students in learning of all measures to students' behavior in comparison and some partial of students dignity.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students in behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of behavior are clearly appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher responds consistently to behavior in consistent, appropriate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of behavior are clearly appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring the class behavior and for their effective students appear to understand and accept it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and persistent. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
