A Comparative Study Of Middle Eastern Foreign Policy And Intelligence:

A Comparative Study of Middle Eastern Foreign Policy and Intelligence Megan Fink, 2015-08-18 International relations especially in the Middle East will define our generation's period in history. This study focuses on the sociopolitical and historical influences on the foreign policy decisions and intelligence actions of Iran, Israel, and Saudi Arabia. By understanding the culture of these diverse nations in the Middle East, we can better understand the region and the way it chooses to influence the world.

A Comparative Study of Middle Eastern Foreign Policy Megan Ashley Fink, 2015. This study monitored the intelligence and foreign policy actions of Israel, Iran, and Saudi Arabia from August 2013 to August 2014. Data was collected from coverage by Associated Press, The Wall Street Journal, and Al Jazeera, three reliable and respected news sources that cover global events. The actions taken by foreign policymakers in these countries were recorded throughout the study period. These actions were organized into a taxonomy based on whether they were intelligence based or non intelligence based. Within those broad categories, more distinguishing characteristics were analyzed to show patterns of behavior within national intelligence services of the nations studied. These patterns show a lot about how these nations approach diplomacy and national security. Conclusions were drawn with respect to these nations' intelligence communities by focusing through the lenses of comparative religion, economic considerations, colonial background, and cold war history. By concentrating on the socioeconomic environment behind these foreign policy actions, political scientists and policymakers can more completely analyze foreign affairs, particularly in the Middle East, and can make more valuable contributions to the global intelligence community and to cultural understanding between nations. The Road to War in Iraq: Comparative Foreign Policy Analysis Chris Featherstone, 2025-04-09. This book combines three Foreign Policy Analysis (FPA) models to explain both how and why the US and UK decided to invade Iraq in 2003. These three FPA models each examine a different but closely related aspect of the individual level of decision making. Firstly, Groupthink examines how pathologies of small group decision making affected the processes in the US and UK decision to invade Iraq. Secondly, the Leadership Style framework examines how the individual leader's style of exercising their leadership affected the navigation of the decision making process. Thirdly, analogical reasoning examines how decision makers frame their actions both in their own decision making and in how they present their decision to the wider public. By achieving these objectives, The Road to War contributes to the field of FPA and to our understanding of how the decision to invade Iraq was taken. The comparative use of these FPA models within a single framework means that this book responds to the calls for multifactorial research within FPA, proposing and testing a framework that provides more complex answers through adopting a multifactorial framework. These more nuanced complex answers then reveal more about the role of the individuals involved in the decision to invade Iraq and how their cognition affected the process that led to the decision to invade. Catalog United States Naval Academy, 1986.
