Exploring Climate Change Related Systems and Scenarios Jeremy Winston Webb, 2024-06-28. Jeremy Webb draws on multiple disciplines to piece together the climate change puzzle, identifying what it would take to limit climate change and its impacts. The book starts with a summary of the climate change problem and develops a Climate Change National Interests International Cooperation (CCNIIC) model of the climate response system. Webb reviews reverse stress testing, backcasting, and theory of change methods, showing how they can be used to collect a large sample of possible futures. He also shows how we can explore the multiverse of futures using a new method called thematic chain analysis, finding relevant connections across scenarios. In the second half of the book, Webb explores 175 scenarios collected through 27 interviews with climate change experts. From these scenarios, a signal response model is developed. Preconditions for effective social change and behaviour, political will and policy, as well as business and economic activity, are synthesised. Lessons include preconditions for effective global responses to climate change, showing what it takes to limit climate change and related impacts. The book finishes with an epilogue applying the signal response model and preconditions for effective global responses to COVID-19, demonstrating that models from this book can be applied to other global response problems and used to quickly assess possible response strategies. This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of climate change, environmental policy, and future studies.

Neuroscience for Organizational Change Hilary Scarlett, 2025-07-03 Organizational change can be unpredictable and stressful. With a better understanding of what our brains need to focus, organizations can increase employee engagement, productivity, and wellbeing to successfully manage periods of uncertainty. Drawing on the latest scientific research, the third edition of Neuroscience for Organizational Change brings the work of neuroscientists out of the lab and into the workplace in a practical and accessible way. It explores the need for social connection at work, how best to manage emotions, how to top up our mental energy, what influences our behaviour and our decision making, and why we need communication, involvement, and collaboration to help us through change. This updated edition features a new chapter on neurodiversity and psychological safety, as well as new content based on the latest fascinating insights from neuroscience, such as the impact of interoception on our decision making, how to create a challenge mindset at work, what makes us more receptive to feedback, and the role of interbrain synchronization in team performance and collaboration. Full of practical tips, interviews, and examples of how these insights have been applied from organizations such as PepsiCo, the Neurodiversity Employee Resource Group at Philips, and the UK's Office for National Statistics, this essential guide provides a long-term view of the benefits of applying neuroscience in organizations.

Reaching an International Agreement on Climate Change Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Environmental Audit Committee, 2008-07-08 The agreement of the Bali roadmap charted a course for negotiations on a successor agreement to the Kyoto Protocol when it expires in 2012. But there remain uncertainties about the pace and eventual outcome of the negotiations. A post-2012 agreement will only be a success if it is guided by the science which warns that developed countries must reduce emissions by 25-40 per cent by 2020 and 80-95 per cent by 2050. These figures only translate to a 50-50 chance of avoiding dangerous climate change, and the international community should aspire to even greater reductions. Most developing countries are not required to reduce emissions but will need to commit to certain actions that will limit the growth of and eventually stabilise their emissions. The Committee believes that the targets for developed countries and commitment to actions by developing countries are the minimum that the UK and EU should accept in the negotiations. Diplomacy will be key in helping to reach agreement on the effort required. The Government will have to work closely with developing countries to explore the actions that they might be willing to commit to. The post-2012 agreement can be more flexible and creative than its predecessor in responding to the different needs of different countries. It is clear that substantial developed country financing will be required in order to shift developing countries onto a low-carbon path and also to encourage them to agree to mitigation actions.
