Edward Griffiths, 1762 Labyrinth of Digressions René Bosch, Piet Verhoeff, 2007 With their appearance during the 1760s the five instalments of Laurence Sterne's The Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy Gentleman caused something like a booksellers hype. Small publishers and anonymous imitators seized on Sterne's success by bringing out great numbers of spurious new volumes, critical or ironic pamphlets and works that in style and title express a congeniality with Tristram Shandy. This study explores these eighteenth-century imitations as indicators of contemporary assumptions about Sterne's intentions. Comparisons between the original, the first reactions and a number of late eighteenth-century imitations show that Tristram Shandy was initially read against the background of Augustan and Grub-street satire. The earliest imitators harked back to traditions of banter and folklore, bawdy and grotesque humour, pathetic stories and orthodox religiosity, reaffirming a pattern of moral and aesthetic values that was conservative for its time. Philosophical Sentimentalism appears to have been a late development. It is also argued that partly because of their bad reputation, some of the authors of forgeries and parodies had a greater influence on the original than the reviewers to whom Sterne is often said to have listened. The imitators followed leads and themes in the first instalments, developing them according to their own conception of Sterne's project and the reasons for his success. As a consequence, they unintentionally put a pressure on Sterne to alter his course and even to abandon some of the narrative lines and themes he had set out for himself. The literature section contains a chronological checklist of English eighteenth-century Sterneana.

The Affecting Case of the Unfortunate Thomas Daniels Thomas Daniels, 2015-08-04 Excerpt from The Affecting Case of the Unfortunate Thomas Daniels Who Was Tried at the Sessions Held at the Old Bailey September 1761 for the Supposed Murder of His Wife. But when a person in one of the lowest classes of mankind by a fatal accident appears before a court of justice with apparent evidences of guilt sufficient to influence a jury of his impartial countrymen to sentence him to the most severe penalty the law can inflict, when this man meers from the advantage of a good character in the narrow circle of his acquaintance and from a re-examination into the probability of the fact for which he was condemned shall have the inferences drawn from the depositions on his trial totally invalidated so that the sentence passed on him is freely remitted, it is such a sanction of his innocence that it would be cruel and unjust in particulars afterward to retain any suspicions injurious to him. It ought to be principally attended to in this affair that his Majesty whose regal virtues are so generally known and acknowledged cannot appear in a more amiable view than in the attention with which he is said to have endeavoured to discover the merits of the intercession made for this poor convict. An instance which as it may be deemed too trivial to engage any particular share of princely consideration yet is certainly one of the truly parental duties of a Monarch and will endear him in the hearts of many of his useful subjects who are beneath caring for the retention of Guadalupe or Canada. And it is doing justice to the poor fellow to own that he seems to retain a grateful if not a politely expressed sensibility of the great obligation he owes to the royal parent of this his second period of existence.
